- Brazil dilemma
- Policies for quality and excellence

INEP

The National Institute for Educational Studies and Research Anísio Teixeira (INEP) is a Brazilian federal state company linked to the Ministry of Education (MEC).

INEP coordinates educational assessment systems (Basic and Higher education) projects and organizes the system of educational statistics and data in order to provide information for the development, implementation, supervision and evaluation of educational policies at federal, state and local levels.

INEP also produces and publishes educational studies and researches, as well as it develops statistical surveys and assessments, which comprise all modalities of education, except post graduation studies.

Policies for Access in Higher Education

PROUNI (Program University for All):

- Private universities with certified quality levels receive tax exemptions and offer scholarships
- Applicants come from public secondary schools and low income families

Institutions

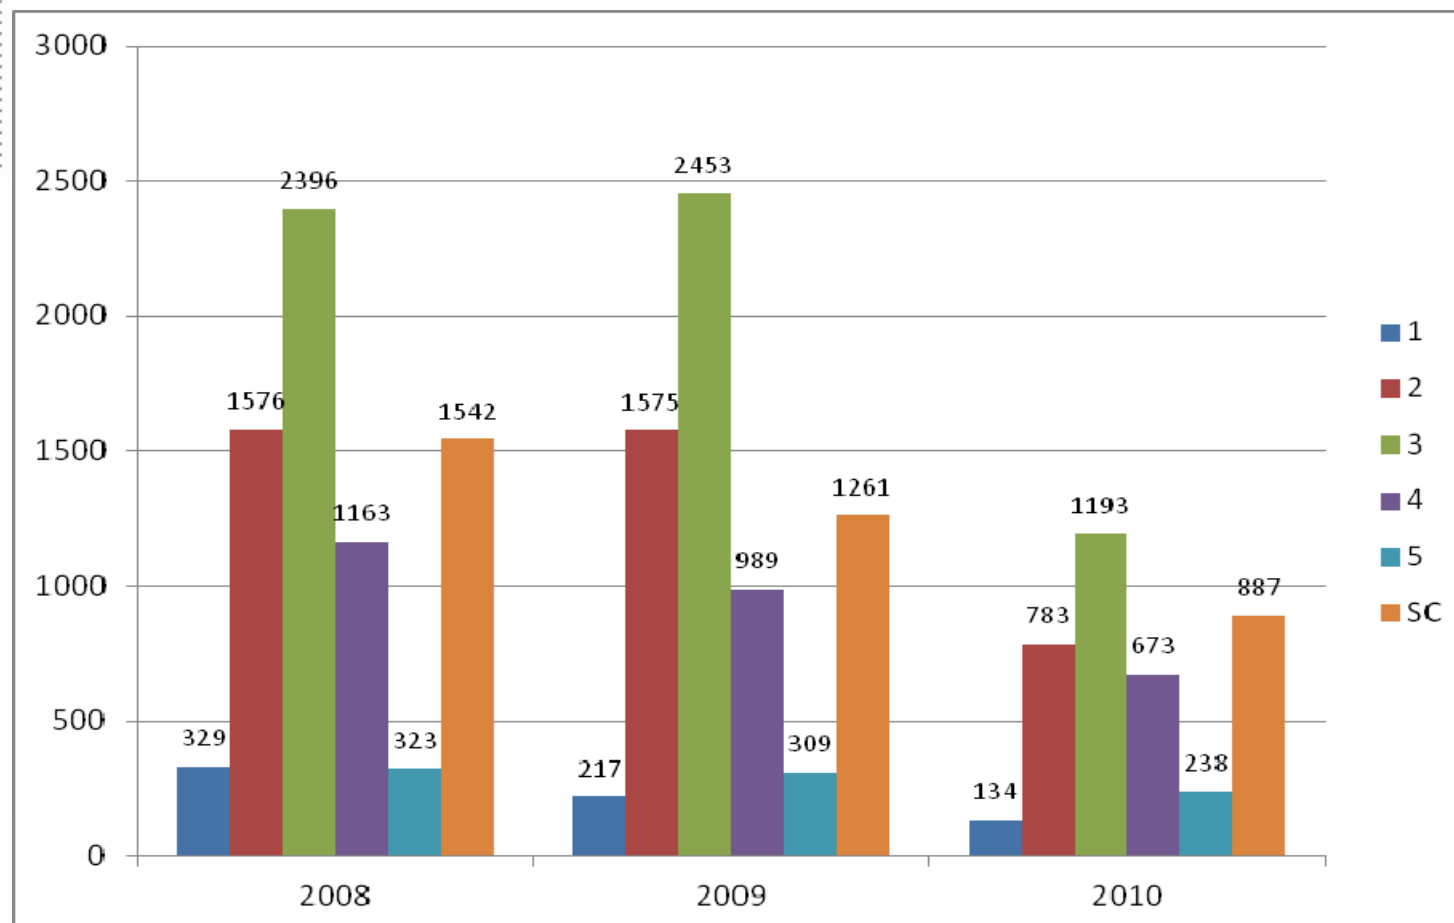

SINAES Assessment Cycles

- All undergraduate programs are assessed every three years: beginning with ENADE (exam administered to students of certain areas defined each year by the Ministry of Education) and followed by in situ evaluations of the respective programs and respective HEIs.

ENADE

- The National Exam of Student Performance (ENADE) is administered every year to students of predetermined areas. Each undergraduate course participates every three years.
- The tests include general and specific knowledge and competences.
- ENADE produces grades for each assessed course, based on the students outcomes both in the general and specific tests.

CPC

- The Preliminary Course Rating(CPC) includes different variables from the results of the assessment of student outcomes, the infrastructure and facilities, the didactic and pedagogical resources and the teaching staff.
- The preliminary rating is a reference for evaluation processes aiming at the renewal of accreditation of undergraduate courses.

CPC

IGC

The General Index of Courses of an Institution (IGC) is a higher education institution quality indicator that considers:

- The average of the last CPCs, including the year in which it is calculated and the two previous years, weighed by the number of enrolments in each course.
- The average of CAPES evaluations, also weighed by the number of enrolments of each graduation (post graduation) programs.
- The distribution of students by the different levels of the course.
